It's easy to get into a rut when it comes to covering car accidents - focus on mangled vehicles and emergency personnel at scene. But this photographer took a different approach, and it worked.

According to the Sûreté du Québec (SQ), glaring sun may have played a role in a head-on collision on a county road on March 18.
At about 3 p.m. last Tuesday, two vehicles collided on the crest of a hill on Zion Line near Shawville about a kilometre from Hwy. 148.
According to SQ Sgt. Marc Tessier, the sun may have blinded one of the drivers on the way up the hill, who then swerved to the left and into an oncoming vehicle.
Emergency services quickly arrived on the scene where both drivers, a man and a woman, as well as a baby were brought to the hospital for observation.
The child was free of any injuries and the adults were released with only minor injuries, confirmed Tessier.
Since the sun may be at fault, no charges will be pressed, said Tessier.
