

BEST FRONT PAGE

Overall, the newspapers in this category are drawing people to their newspaper with effective front pages because that's what we have to do to keep people reading our papers. I gave extra marks if that newspaper immediately drew my attention, whether it was graphics, a photo or not cramped or cluttered. A couple of papers were too "boxy" so really liked how The Equity treated the "On The Inside." My pet peeve is still carry-over stories from the front page. The most I ever like to see is one story carried over. And never carry over a story in mid-sentence. How can the reader possibly enjoy an "easy" read if they are flipping back and forth. Studies show you lose your readers. One newspaper had all four stories on the front page carried over in mid-sentence!

THE EQUITY

This front page moved to the top of my choices immediately because of its excellent choice and layout of photo, well-written news stories utilizing good headlines and subheadings that all gave it nice effective white space. Like the way the "Inside" stories were also set in, making them stand out without allowing the front page to become too boxy! Excellent work!

THE SUBURBAN (CITY EDITION)

I like the way this newspaper chose to highlight what was the top news of the week. A well-designed page. Congratulations!

Liberals' Marc Miller handily takes new riding of Ville-Marie

By P.A. Sevigny
The Suburban

As both a lawyer and a former serving officer in the Canadian Army, Liberal Marc Miller is now the man who will represent Montreal's Ville-Marie riding. He is one of the new Prime Minister's oldest friends and he handily defeated the NDP's Allison Turner — another city lawyer with a stellar resume.

Miller told The Suburban that he continues to believe that a "pro-active" collaboration between all three levels of local government will do a lot to help develop local solutions in a riding that includes both the richest and poorest people in the city.

During another interview Miller described his riding as both part of the city's essential core as well as a major player within Quebec's economic and social infrastructure.

Housefather wins in Mount Royal

By Joel Goldenberg
The Suburban

Anthony Housefather won the Mount Royal riding for the Liberals Monday night, after a hard fought battle with Conservative candidate Robert Libman and the NDP's Mario Jacinto Rimbao.

The outgoing Cote St. Luc mayor received 24,317 votes (50.4 percent) to Libman's 18,213 (37.8 percent) and Rimbao's 3,889 (8.1 percent). I wanted to bring our ridings

Housefather's supporters, among them outgoing Mount Royal MP Irwin Cotler, former D'Arcy McGee MNA Lawrence Bergman, members of Cote St. Luc council, former Hampstead councillor Bonnie Feigenbaum, and campaign manager Sidney Margles, were jubilant and emotional.

"Tonight is a terrific night for Canada," Housefather said. "Justin Trudeau is ready. I wanted to bring our ridings

Garneau re-elected in NDG-Westmount

By P.A. Sevigny
The Suburban

Compared to the near-death experience that defined the 2011 election when veteran Liberal MP Marc Garneau thought he had lost the election to the NDP's Joanne Garneau, last night's election turned out to be little more than a walk in the park during which the Liberal incumbent won his election by a large majority.

During an interview with The Suburban during the final weeks of the campaign, Garneau mentioned that the past ten years have given the Liberal Party of Canada "...a lot to think about," and following last night's victory, he mentioned that the time has come to put a lot of our ideas into action.

As Garneau was one of the party's leadership candidates, chances are that the former astronaut will be asked to occupy a seat amid the Prime Minister's new cabinet.

This newspaper does a very good job of covering two languages and still present an effective front page. I like the use of subheadings, and the "On The Inside," in my opinion, is very reader-friendly. Congratulations.
