In a study performed late last year by the American Press Institute (API) entitled Newspaper Next 2.0 (see <http://www.newspapernext.org/>), the importance of the web to newspapers is clearly outlined. These winning entries displayed some of the critical components that are highlighted in this report that are needed to better engage with their communities. I would like to see publishers allow their public to access their material online for free, even if the newspaper has a paid circulation, as this is the model that works for the internet and one that will help our industry tap into new revenue streams.
